LOHO

The Story Behind LOHO

Studio LOHO is a Belgian design office located in Bruges, Belgium. Founded in 2017 by Karel Loontiens and Jo Hoeven, the studio focused from the beginning on high-end bespoke interior projects which forms an ideal matrix for product and material design that is both innovative and durable.

Karel Loontiens & Jo Hoeven

We develop materials and shape objects from natural resources, guided by material, form, and presence.

At Studio LOHO, we focus on creating designs that endure. In a time when disposable products are no longer viable, our mission is to craft pieces that will be cherished for generations.

Our journey began with the introduction of a collection of clay bathtubs, perfectly embodying the essence of Studio LOHO and marking our international breakthrough. The focus on and appreciation for raw materials in this collection reflects our approach to interior design, defined by a bold and recognizable style. At the request of architects and designers, the collection quickly expanded to include new basins and bathtubs.

Alongside our permanent collections, we apply our craftsmanship to bespoke creations. Together with our clients and partners, we explore new possibilities, enabling us to continually push boundaries. This shared pursuit of innovation and excellence is a cornerstone of who we are.

At Studio LOHO, we remain committed to creating thoughtful, lasting designs that stand the test of time. Every piece we create reflects our core philosophy: timeless beauty and enduring quality. Molding boundaries, in every design we craft.

Leather Tables

← BACK TO ALL TABLES

The LOHO Leather Table is reduced to its essence. A simple tabletop with legs, finished with a leather surface. At the points of connection, four pins hold everything together. They bind the leather, the tabletop, and the legs into one. The construction is direct and without excess, allowing the material and its use to define the object over time.

Resting on top is a piece of saddle leather, cut precisely to the shape of the table. Crafted with the same care as a leather object, it becomes the focal point of the piece. Over time, the leather will evolve. It will mark, darken, and develop a patina that reflects its use. Where the table is touched most, it will show. Gradually, the table becomes defined by the people around it. The first mark defines it. From that moment on, the table becomes yours.

Hopscotch Tables

← BACK TO ALL TABLES

The Hopscotch Table takes its cue from the familiar game: a grid, a rhythm of steps, a composition in motion. Individual elements come together in different colours and formations, creating a table that can be composed and rearranged. Playful yet functional, it is an invitation to gather, eat and play.

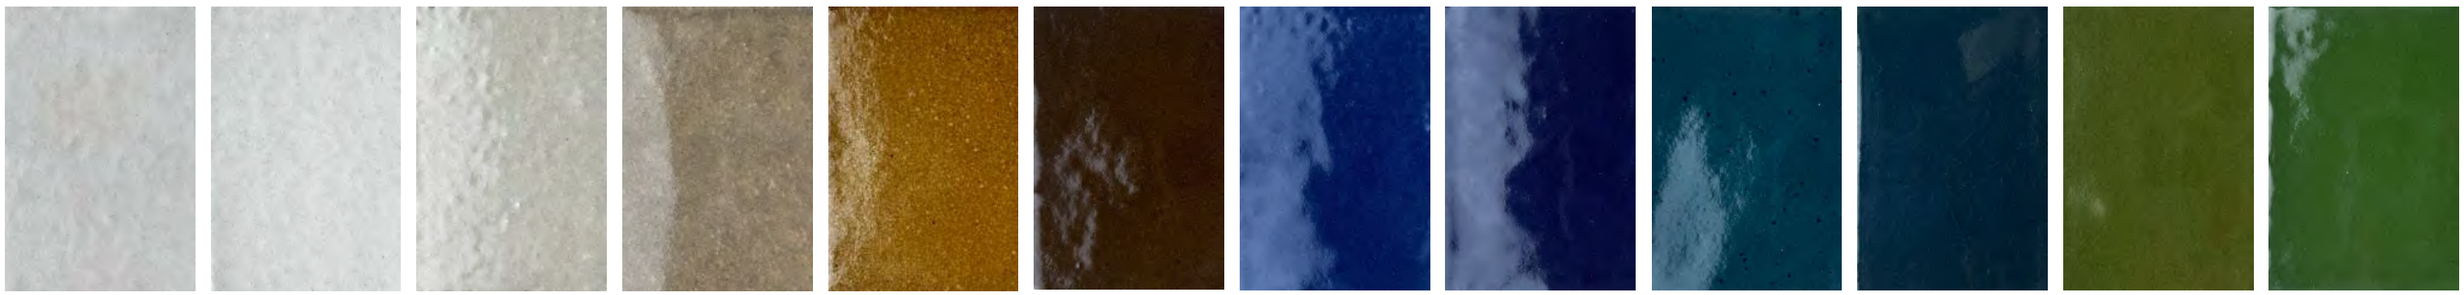

Each element is made from stoneware, finished in a glazed or matte surface and available in a wide range of colors that can be freely combined. Resting on a slender metal base, the elements can be arranged as a compact square, a long dining table or a rounded composition. Frost-resistant and made for both indoor and outdoor use throughout all seasons.

Fragment Tables

← BACK TO ALL TABLES

The concept behind the Fragment Table began as a wall. For our showroom, Jonojé in Bruges, clay was left to dry and crack naturally, then reassembled piece by piece onto the facade. Our Fragment Table translates that process from an architectural surface into an object. At Studio LOHO, we let natural materials reveal their character. What might be seen as a flaw becomes the design — shaped partly by us, partly by the clay itself.

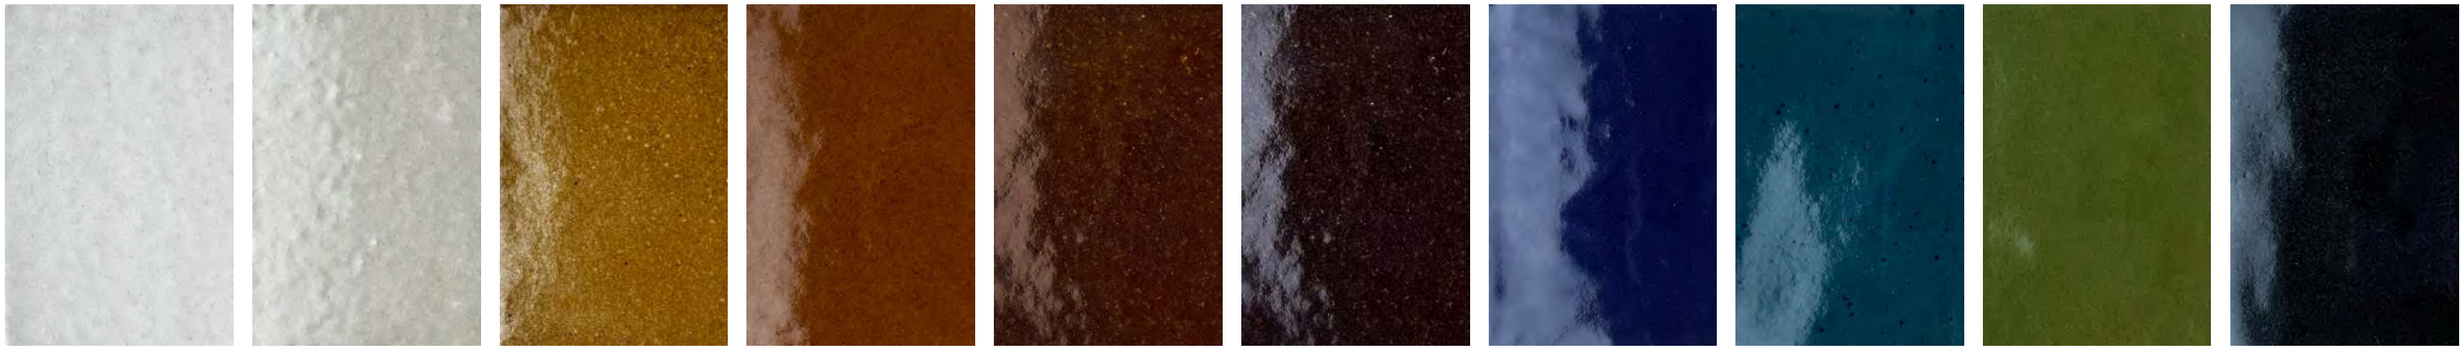

Large sections of clay are formed and left to dry until they break on their own. The fragments are gathered, reassembled by hand, joined and glazed into a single, tactile surface. The pattern is never drawn beforehand: the clay decides where it breaks.
Every tabletop is unique, and the fractures remain visible as traces of the making.

The first bathtubs and basins in our Clay Series were sculpted in 2016. Each piece is handmade entirely from clay and then fired to become durable ceramic. This delicate process requires patience and exceptional craftsmanship. While the design has remained largely unchanged, the production process has been refined over time, enhancing both energy efficiency and strength for even greater durability.

LOHO Clay Basins are crafted from fired clay, creating a strong and durable ceramic base. Each piece can be finished in two distinct ways; Pure Clay or Glaze, typically applied to the interior of the bathtub or basin for both functionality and style.

Different finishes, same base

Pure Clay

Introduced in 2024, the ceramic surface is meticulously hand-polished in two finishes: honed for a silky, matte result, or brushed to retain the natural skin of the clay. Highly durable and easy to maintain, it is designed for intensive use, making it ideal for hospitality and high-traffic environments.

Lifetime Warranty

Glaze

A curated palette of 8 colors allows for refined, timeless compositions. The Glaze finish is applied by spraying the selected color onto the clay surface, followed by a fine glass layer and kiln firing. This process creates a smooth, soft and subtly glossy finish. The result is a durable, easy-to-maintain surface, designed for everyday use.

Pure Clay

Pure Clay is the overarching finish family for LOHO Clay Basins, available in two distinct variations. Honed is hand-polished to achieve a silky, matte surface that reveals the natural depth and tactility of the material. Brushed retains the natural skin of the clay, preserving its raw, tactile character. Subtle, refined and highly durable, both finishes are designed for everyday use with minimal maintenance.

Glaze

LOHO Clay Basins are available in two distinct finishes, each enhancing the material in its own way. Glaze introduces a layer of color and protection. Applied to the surface and kiln-fired, it creates a smooth, softly glossy finish. Available in a curated palette of 9 engobe colors and 8 base colors, it adds depth, character and ease of maintenance to the basin.

Since 2016, LOHO crafts bathtubs entirely from clay, one of the oldest and most enduring natural materials. Each piece is shaped by hand in our atelier from a single material, without composites, metals or synthetic layers. This monolithic approach creates a pure, continuous form where material and shape become one. Through firing, the clay transforms into a strong, durable ceramic. Built to last for generations. More than a bathtub, it is a sculptural object defined by honesty, precision and material integrity.

Clay naturally retains heat, keeping water warm for longer and enhancing the bathing experience. Each form is carefully shaped to support the body in a natural, relaxed way.

Bathtubs sculpted from natural stone, built to last for generations. The perfect bath requires the right stone, chosen for its stunning texture, while the interior remains soft to the touch. Hours of meticulous preparation — sculpting and modeling, allow us to work with more precision than we ever thought possible.

A frequently heard comment about stone baths is the rapidly falling temperature of the water. To prevent this, the bath was fitted with an internal heating element. The system does not heat the water but slows down the cooling.

Squeeze Lamps

LOHO

← BACK TO ALL OBJECTS

Defined by pressure and precision, the Squeeze Lamp is reduced to a clear and essential gesture. Two curved brass profiles hold and shape the leather shade, giving it its form. The construction remains fully visible. Simple in appearance, yet refined in its execution. The tension between the elements creates both structure and softness.

The lampshade is made from saddle leather, carefully crafted and shaped through compression. Over time, the material develops a patina, responding to light, touch, and use. The light can be adjusted by touch, anywhere on the lamp. A direct and intuitive interaction, where use becomes part of the object. A balance of strength and tactility, where brass and leather come together in a controlled and understated composition.
